Reviews for Naked in Eden

Christiane Northrup, M.D.: (Author of Mother-Daughter Wisdom, The Wisdom of Menopause, and Women's Bodies, Women's Wisdom .)

"Naked in Eden is a can't-put-it-down thrilling account of who we really are - and why our connection with the natural world is so healing and vital. This book is a page turner. I couldn't help but think, "I want to see the movie!"

Larry Dossey, MD : (Author of the NY Times best-selling book Healing Words , also Healing Beyond the Body, Reinventing Medicine, and others .)

"Robin Easton's is a heroine's journey that, like all such journeys, risks everything. The payoff is transformation and a discovery of her deep intimacy with the earth itself. At a time when nature as we know it is in peril - and we with it - we need Easton's message as never before."

Michael J Roads : (Author: Talking with Nature/Journey into Nature , 1999 U. S. award winning visionary novel - Getting There, The Magic Formula, More than Money: True Prosperity )

"Every now and then a book comes along that, by its very authenticity makes you sit up and take notice. Naked in Eden: Ancient Memories in the Australian Rainforest is just such a book. As the author shares her experience of being eyeball to eyeball with a deadly snake, I felt an instant rapport. I, too, have been in this situation.

"This is a moment when not only the wrong move, but also the wrong thought can prove to be fatal. Thought sends messages to a snake faster and more subtly than the blink of an eyelid, with the snake's reaction even faster.

"To read an account of a very courageous woman healing herself in Nature, learning - and sharing through her book - many of her profound insights, can not only heal, but can also affect the very reality of your life. We are conscious Beings, and Robin's great lesson was to access this consciousness on an aware and elevated level, thus powerfully and positively affecting every cell of her body.

"We can communicate on a two way level with Nature, but we generally need to be jolted out of our complacent and apathetic relationship with life before this can happen. Robin's illness and the harsh tropical rainforest combined to provide that necessary jolt.

"I enjoyed the authors writing. I enjoyed her exploratory ramblings both in the forest of Nature and the forest of her thoughts. This book is fresh, it moves, it is uplifting, and it contains a positive contribution toward the life of anyone who reads and digests it."

Chellis Glendinning, Ph.D. : (Author of My Name is Chellis and I'm in Recovery From Western Civilization, Off the Map )

"As crusty as an adventure novel, as labyrinthian as a spiritual memoir, Naked in Eden is an in-depth exploration of the central questions of our time: Who are we human beings, and what is our place in this wild world?"

Joseph Dispenza : (Author of The Way of the Traveler, Live Better Longer and God on Your Own: Finding a Spiritual Path Outside Religion. )

"This is a beautiful and brave book, a woman's true story of her remarkable transformation in one of the most exotic, most dazzling, and most dangerous places on earth, the Australian rainforest. As I read Robin Easton's account of her adventures -- tentative at first, then full-hearted -- I felt myself following in her footsteps along her path to self-discovery as if it were my own. There are meaningful lessons of the soul to be learned here in her courageous journeying forth. Her writing is vivid and intense, alive with the colors of the rainforest itself. Compelling reading, spiritually charged, unforgettable."

Thomas Berry, Ph. D.: (Author of The Dream of the Earth , The Great Work: Our Way into the Future and, with Brian Swimme, The Universe Story . His latest collection of essays is Evening Thoughts: Reflecting on Earth as Sacred Community ).

" Naked in Eden is an amazing presentation of life in the most rigorous conditions of nature, evoking that sense of wonder needed for maximal appreciation of the planet and the cosmos."

Lynn Andrews: (Author of the best-selling Medicine Woman series, Love and Power, Tree Dreams, Teaching Around the Sacred Wheel, The Mask of Power, Walk In Balance and more.)

"A wonderful read - that takes you into the wonder of unknown spiritual worlds."
